

From the Editors

After a highly successful incursion into the world of invertebrate conservation in the previous 'special' issue, we return to the more traditional range of subject matters. Molluscs, both marine and land, are represented in these pages, as are a Tasmanian record of the Elbow Orchid, a fossil coral and the Spotted-tailed Quoll. There is something here of interest to almost every naturalist.

Erratum

Our attention has been drawn to an unfortunate error in Martin O'Brien's paper on freshwater and terrestrial crayfish. Due to a production malfunction, the sequences of images on pages 216 to 218 and 220 to 221 were rearranged, thus creating a mismatch with the captions on those pages. The Editors regret this situation and apologise to the author for the error and to any readers who were inadvertently misled. Two inserts containing revised maps and captions, which readers can use to paste over the incorrect passages, are included with this issue.
